Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 20 .- The vast possibilities of trade with South America and the need of a merchant marine ; reap a fair share of that trade, formed the theme of an exhaustive address de livered to-night by Secretary of State Root before the Trans-Mississippi commercial congress.

The address was a graphic presentation of the needs of an effective merchant fleet to enable the United Stats to compete with Europe for the commerce of the South American continent.

A considerable portion of the address was devoted to the subject or extending the American flag over the ocean high ways, and an eloquent and earnest appeal was made by Secretary Root for the pas sage of the ship-subsidy bill presented at the last session of Congress Secretary Root said in part:

Wealth Is Enormous.

"The population of South America in 1900 was only 42,461,381, less than six to the square mile. The density of population was less than one-eighth of that in the State of Missouri, less than onesixtleth of that in the State of Massachu setts, less than one-seventieth of that in England, less than one per cent of that

With this sparse population the production of wealth is already enormous. The latest trade statistics show exports from South America to foreign countries of $745,530,000, and imports of $499,-858,600. Two Continents Contrasted.

"The material resources of South America are in some important respects complementary to our own; that continent is weakest where North America is strongest as a field for manufactures; it has comparatively little coal and iron. In many respects the people of the two contivated, fond of literature, and of expression of the graces and charms of life. while the North American is strenuous, intense, utilitarian.

Where we accumulate, they spend. While we have less of the cheerful philophy which finds sources of happiness in less of the inventive faculty which strive power of man and lower the cost of manufacture. The chief merits of the peo-ples of the two continents are different;

"Mutual intercourse and knowledge cannot fail to greatly benefit both; each can learn from the other; each can teach tribute greatly to the development and prosperity of the other. A large part of their products find no domestic compe The typical conditions exist for that kind of trade which is profitable, honorable and beneficial to both parties.

Between all the principal South American ports and England, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, lines of swift and commodious steamers ply regularly.
